They Would Drive Nehru Crazy

What would you do if someone caught you off balance, shoved you to the ground, kicked you, then acted friendly when bystanders came to your defense?

Prime Minister Nehru thinks the next move should be to get up off the ground, take the help offered by the bystanders and punch the assailant in the nose. "A nation emerges better and stronger when it passes through a crisis and it is so with India," he declares.

This may be carrying hopeful thinking to an extreme, but it cannot be questioned that a nation unable to pass through a crisis would have no chance to emerge at all.

IT WAS inevitable that if both India and China emerged as nations they would challenge each other. One of the monstrous consequences of Krishna Menon's betraval of his trust as defense minister was India's lack of preparation for something that was bound to happen.

It was as though Menon and Nehru had blacked out their sense of history and their knowledge of the world they live in. This is the face Nehru himself put on it when he admitted after China was blasting its way into Indian territory and he was forced to fire Menon that he had been living in a fool's paradise.

But no sooner is help from the United States and Britain on the way than the Chinese marauders call for a cease-fire. Nothing could be more frustrating for the newly aroused Indians than to be deprived of a chance to show their resentment.

The trick will work, however, only if India lets it work. Indian territory was attacked. India was unprepared to repel an invasion. It reacted late, but it did react and it was given prompt assistance by the United States

It should keep on reacting with all the anger it can muster.

EVEN THOUGH fighting is impossible in winter in the high altitudes where the Chinese attack occurred, Prime Minister Nehru should hammer with all his strength and skill on Indian mobilization before

And when spring comes, if the Chinese do not renew the attack, India should go on the offensive.

Otherwise, Nehru and his advisers would be driven crazy by the uncertainty of In-

Eventually. India will have to prove its right to survive as a nation, if this is what its people want to do.

Student Riots After Football

In Cleveland, Philadelphia and Washington, riot calls went out for police to quell freefor-alls among teenagers after Thanksgiving football games.

No one was killed, though many youths were hurt. Eventually, unless post-game brawling can be stopped, there may be as many deaths and injuries among spectators as on the gridiron.

In isolated instances, it has been necessary to do away with the night games that were generating rowdyism among teen-agers. But all the Thanksgiving Day games were played in daylight

Two explanations for spectator brawling come readily to mind - one because it is obvious and admitted, the other because it is not obvious and rarely referred to.

The obvious reason is the emotional stimulation that goes with being a spectator at a football game. Nothing comparable to it is found in any sport other than basketball, where physical contact is discouraged and repressed. In football, however, contact is the essence of the contest.

Only wrestling is more nearly calculated to spark rage among spectators, and in wrestling the effect is calculated; the whole show is put on for effect.

The not-obvious reason — the one rarely referred to - is racial friction.

In situations where school loyalty is augmented by pride of race, a short fuse has been lit on a large bomb. School authorities know this. Police know it. Other spectators

In one such situation, a school principal took over the public address system at the beginning of the contest. Speaking in behalf of the players, their coaches and the principal of the other school, he reminded spectators of their obligation to let no mishavior mar the contest.

He asked for complete cooperation. He put the would-be rowdies on the defensive, and they were still there when the game ended. There were no incidents. When dealing with students, grownups should make a point of remembering that students still have much to learn.

The Changing Europe

It used to be that Horst Pfaff gave up his seat to ladies in crowded streetcars.

He doesn't any more. "Ever since I went to a barber shop and found I had to have my hair cut by a girl, I consider women my equal," he says. "They

When he arrived at his bank and left in the evening, he used to make a ritual of shaking hands with 30 other employes.

"This was a good old German custom. But the manager said 'Nobody gets any work done-you're so busy shaking hands.' So we gave that up, too," Pfaff said.

Old European ways of life are breaking down. There is a great upsurge and ease in travel. Mass production and advertising means Europeans have similar wants. Prosperity has brought an extraordinary improvement in the European standard of living during the last 10 years.

WEST EUROPE'S 300 millions are better off than they or their ancestors eyer were. They live almost 60 per cent as well as the average American. That official statistic takes into account the large areas of poverty in Greece, southern Italy, Spain and Portugal.

Millions who never would have dreamed of such luxuries a few years ago now are buying automobiles, television sets, washing machines, refrigerators and all the imaginable appliances known to Americans since the 1920s and 1930s.

European patterns of living are beginning to resemble those in America.

Every 11th West European now has a car and the gap rapidly is narrowing toward America's one car for every three persons. The automobile has become a status sym-

"The man with the biggest car now tries to pass everybody on the road - which accounts for the immensely high accident rates on highways which often have no speed limit," said a Swiss editor.

OR TAKE housing as an example of how things have changed.

Before the war, the highest aspiration of average European was a two-or three-room apartment in the city. On Sundays, he would muster his entire family with rucksacks on their backs, take the streetcar to the city outskirts and go for a long hike.

Now, many Europeans in large cities aspire for a small villa in the suburbs. As a result, satellite towns and communities are developing on the American model.

"Every Paris taxi - driver now works and hopes for the opportunity to buy a tiny plot of land and build himself a small weekend house," said a French sociologist.

"Every Frenchman hopes first for an automobile, then a wife, and finally that plot of land." Take the role of women as another example.

Thirty - four per cent of German women now are working. They used to retire quietly to the corner and never butt into private conversations of their husbands. Now they

BONN not only talk, but also take an active part the seizure of India.

Their shopping habits have changed too. Frau Schmidt and Madame Robert used to go out before each meal to purchase the makings. They would have a nice chat with the little storekeeper around the corner and select something from his limited supply.

Now supermarkets, department stores and mail - order houses are springing up. The housewife gets a better selection, including ready-to-serve frozen foods, but no local gos-

Buying on the installment plan also has become a habit to millions whose grandfathers would turn in their graves at the thought.

OF ALL the new changes in Europe, sociologists say the most significant is taking place in family life.

Europe's population, is rising about two million a year.

Families still are small, but the twochild limit is less usual. On the other hand, tight family life is breaking down. The family today is less of a solid unit. Father no longer is the iron - handed absolutist of old. French fathers shout and expostulate with their young and hold them to a series of rigidly regulated duties, but the extreme discipline of a generation ago is declining. "It used to be," a teacher in Germany said, "that children wrote compositions about how strict their parents were, how many whippings they got, what was demanded of them and what friends they were permitted. "Nowadays, they write about how mother takes care of the house, what she buys, how much pocket money they get and what new gadget father brought him yesterday."

A German social study noted that once children were exploited by their parents. Now it is the other way around.

This and That

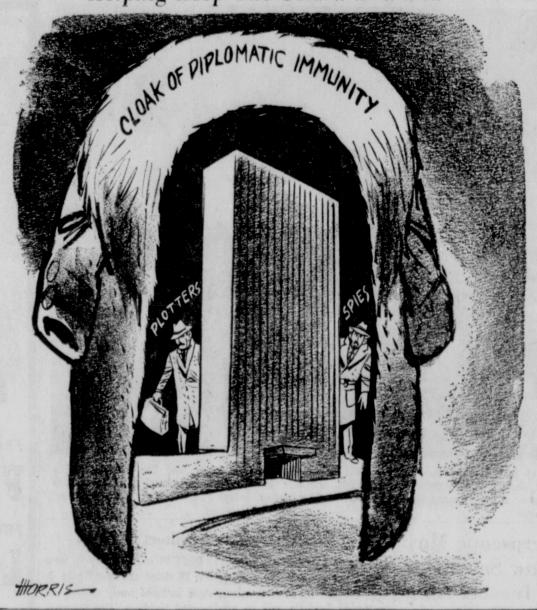

The original U.S. "Pledge of Allegiance" to the flag was written by Francis Bellamy and was used at the dedication of the Chicago World's Fairgrounds on Oct. 12, 1892, when the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America was celebrated. However, the pledge wasn't officially approved by Congress until Dec. 28, 1945.

One of the oddest monuments to victims of war stands in Lille, France, It commemorates the 20,000 Allied carrier pigeons, killed in action during World War I. There were more than 500,000 of these little birds employed for messenger service during the 1914-

Curran Battles For Free Nations

By Victor Riesel

All through the gory days of the bloodiest blasting of young Indian troops by veteran Communist Chinese mountain fighters, a gentleman from Japan was quite royally entertained in To that genwhen there are Victor Riesel enough yens involved to total a $500 million trade agreement. Takasaki was the head of a private Japanese trade mission negotiating with Communist Premier Chou En-lai and Kiao Chen-chih, head of the Communist Chinese Afro-Asian Solidarity Committee.

These Chinese also are mem-By Richard O'Regan bers of a Communist militaryeconomic high command directing

The rest is secret. Japan is not the only democratic land wheeling and dealing with the Communist Chinese. Apparently no one who can make a dollar out of Communist trade is taking the invasion of Pacifist India as a personal insult.

Feeding Communist China all through the deadliest fighting have been the merchant fleets of Norway, Sweden, Canada, England, Liberia and Panama.

The latter two carry oil to Singapore. In that great harbor, the fuel, without which China is helpless, is shifted to Scandinavian tankers. These and other cargo vessels run a shuttle between Cey-

Hong Kong and Chinese ports, especially Shanghai.

SO HEAVY is this trade, the British and Norwegian skippers keep their captains, mates and crews on the shuttle run for months. The men, I learned directly from them in Hong Kong, frequently don't get home for a year or more. On this maritime front there is at least one angry man. He's towering Joe Curran, leader of the National Maritime Union - and he's set to fly to Europe for a showdown with the global federation of sailors' unions.

What Joe Curran wants speciffically is a worldwide strike of tens of thousands (of the one million sailors of the free world) against Red China and Cuba. It was Joe Curran, leader of some 40,000 U. S. Seamen, who cut off the flow of fuel and civilian goods as well as military supplies to the Soviets' island satellite.

Then Curran called on the International Transport Workers Federation. This ITF has six million land and sea transport workers in its affiliated membership.

If it could pull a global general strike, even for a short time, it could cripple much of the Communist world. The ITF has made such a big thing of its anti-Communist sentiment! But when called on to backup their pious words

But there is going to be another meeting of these men. They will gather in Hamburg late in January at a session of what they call their Fair Practices Committee. This is a tactical operating group set up to put into action any resolution passed by the bigger committees of ITF.

Down Through The Years

From The Review Files

THIRTY YEARS AGO - Officials of three district schools -East Liverpool, Wellsville and Chester — made a joint announcement that they had decided to abandon girls' basketball for the 1932-33 season.

A graphic story of her experience with a robin was related by Miss Sara Ellen Porter of Pennsylvania Ave. in an issue of Nature's Magazine.

TWENTY YEARS AGO - Emmanuel G. Lamping of East Liverpool received the rank of second lieutenant in the medical corps at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. The completion of the Hibbets Dam bridge near Wellsville was announced by County Engineer Charles Snyder at Lisbon.

By George Lichty

Is only taking back misslies and hardware, comrade technician! ... Is NOT taking Cuba home with us! ... '

TEN YEARS AGO - A second postage meter machine was installed at the local post office to speed the mailing of parcels.

Charles S. Groubert of Dakota Ave. and Frank Johnson of Drane St. took Civil Service Commission exams for the post of maintenance men of the Incinerator Department.

Out Of Coins

The Bureau of the Mint, in common with many of its customers, can't make money fast enough-especially before Christ-

As the 1962 shopping season began, the mint was out of coins. "Our cupboard is bare," said Miss Eva B. Adams, director of the mint. "We have nothing in our inventory now, and we are sending out coins as fast as they are made.

The demand for change increased beyond all expectations, Miss Adams explained. She foresaw continuing shortages in the holiday season, especially in the Northeast and Midwest. A Chicago grocery chain, for example, has spent $10,000 since May transporting small coins to city stores from suburban banks, which have fewer calls for their supply of change. The mint's presses stamp out coins by the billions, but the big demand for small change creates periodic shortages. The mint lists several reasons for the popularity of clinking cash. More people are spending more money than ever before. Some four million vending machines gobble up coins and hold them longer than cash registers. Parking meters now line streets in suburbia as well as downtown areas. New shopping centers and banks all over the country require small mountains of change to open for business.

The Payoff In Cuba

By David Lawrence

Moscow Has Played A Crafty Game

The Cuban problem will drag along for months, if not years. On balance, today the Soviets are ahead of the game. They beachhead in Cuba, which now has become a fullfledged member of the Comm unist bloc. It's the first conquest | by the Communists in this David Lawrence hemisphere.

Moscow played a crafty game and got the prize it wanted-a potential military base within 90 miles of the United States. Moscow put offensive weapons into Cuba. Withdrawal now doesn't mean they cannot be secretly replaced later. Moscow got away without a public denunciation of its course in terms of world policy. Even the allies of the United States, while sympathizing with this country's position, took no steps to condemn the Soviets before the whole world for having aimed an aggressive military action against the American people.

Moscow has elicited in behalf of Castro a public pledge from the President of the United States that America's military forces will not invade Cuba. This promise has been given notwithstanding the historic policy of the United States-as enunciated in the Monroe Doctrine-that no European power will be permitted to establish its "system" in any country in this hemisphere.

MOSCOW IS FREE to render to Cuba any aid of a military nature-and the United States acquiesces-provided only that the weapons are for "defensive" purposes. A lieutenant general of the U.S. Army, who served in World War II in Europe and now is retired, wrote this correspondent the other day about the buildup of defensive arms in Cuba. He

"How naive can the American people get? A universal and basic principle of war is that 'the best defensive is an effective offense.' Name any offensive weapon from flame-thrower to 'ardened' Atlas, and it could be described as a defensive weapon ad infinitum. The mass retaliatory power of the United States today s considered by our government and the people as 'defensive,' not offensive."

This undoubtedly reflects the viewpoint of many a military officer in the Pentagon who has been forbidden to talk to the press. It is true that President Kennedy is asking for and still hopes some day to get on-the-site inspection in Cuba to determine whether the missiles and the strategic bombers have been withdrawn. But already the President has made a concession by affirming that he merely wants offensive weapons removed. The haggling as to what constitutes defensive or offensive weapons will go on for a long, long time. Meanwhile, Castro is assured against any military act by the United States to liberate the people of Cuba. Even the Cuban exiles are in an anomalous position now, for they don't know whether, if they try to recover control of their native land, the United States may find itself committed by President Kennedy's pledge of "no invasion" to prevent any expedition directed toward Cuba not only from the territory of this country but from any Latin-American country.

BEFORE THE MISSILE incident. Castro had no such protection. It was feared by him that the Bay of Pigs invasion might be repeated. The Russians now have secured for him a pledge against this from the United

Their clever strategy in setting up missiles and then withdrawing them in exchange for American assurances of no invasion has

The President, in his press conference last Tuesday, obliterated the prospect of any military aid to the Cuban people to regain their independence. He merely said the United States "will not abandon our purpose and hope that the Cuban people some day be truly free." He then added quickly: "But these policies are very different from any intent to launch a military invasion of the

One of the newsmen at the same press conference said to the President that there "appeared to be an implication that possibly you would be willing to guarantee Castro against any and all enemies anywhere."

The President dodged a direct answer and merely said that the statement he had made, and which is quoted above, "describes very clearly what the policy of the government is in regard to 'no invasion.' "

So the Cuban exiles who have been hoping for some kind of help in the United States to enable them to take military measures to rescue their fellow countrymen in Cuba now find themselves checkmated.

NO SATISFACTORY way, moreover, has been agreed upon to make sure that all the socalled "offensive" weapons will have been removed. Castro is being given ample time to hide them. The Washington Post, often supporter of administration policies, has just said:

"Verification of the kind contemplated in the exchange of letters between the President and Premier Khrushchev has not been accomplished and safeguards against the future introduction of offensive weapons have not been devised. These are matters of the utmost importance to this country and the execution of the American part of the bargain cannot be expected as long as these de-

So, for the time being anyway, Castro and Khrushchev are ahead of the game while the American people-fightened by the missile threat which was part of a phony strategy of deception in the first place-now are being told only that they have been saved from a terrible war and that compromises and concessions were necessary.

ministries of foreign affairs and labor recently decided to meet the issue head-on with an English language brochure entitled: "Wage Problems in Japan." Frankly enough, the government booklet admits that, on the average, Japanese industrial workers earn about 30 cents an hour compared with $2.29 in the United States, 75 cents in the United Kingdom and 62 cents in West Germany.

But like a good lawyer arguing a case, the government says there are extenuating circumstances.

Japanese companies as standard practice pay out "extras" to their employes ranging from dormitory accommodations, free commutation tickets and in some cases meals or bonuses which amount yearly to three months basic pay.

WHITE COLLAR men may enjoy, depending on their rank, expense accounts which cover lavish entertainment including nightclubs, bars and restaurants. Some companies even maintain seaside hotels for use by their employes at costs as low as $1 a day. According to the booklet, 80 per cent of all business enterprises own employe welfare facilities and offer such benefits as free medical care in addition to retirement programs.

But there is no claim, even with these fringe benefits, that Japanese wages are even close to European standards. Recent statistics reported by the government say that Japan's per capita national income is $341 a year compared to $509 in Italy, $061 in France, $1,086 in the United Kingdom and $2,309 in the United

U.S. Rules Out Animals In Moon Shot

CLEVELAND (AP)-The Unit ed States probably will not use animals in "dry runs" to pave the way for a landing on the moon, Dr. Hugh L. Dryden, deputy administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, says.

He made the statement Sunday night at a news conference prior to a dinner held in connec tion with the Space Science Fair being sponsored by NASA and the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Man is an essential element in the Apollo mission," Dr. Dryden said. He explained that "dry runs" of Apollo - type maneuvers would be made in earth orbit during the lattermost twoman Gemini flights and early Apollo trials.

Animal flights were made in the early phases of the Mercury program, now nearing comple-

Storage Wall Idea Offered

A storage wall need not be a big expensive production, a bulky addition to a living room or a large architectural project.

Bookshelves that can be bought unpainted can serve the purpose well with the addition of decorative window shades and a simple do-it-yourself frame.

Such a unit was recently devised by interior designer Lois Munroe to suit her engineer-husband's hi-fi requirements. But in finding a solution for him, she also solved some of her own storage needs.

The area covered was 13 feet along one wall. Seven-foot-high bookcases were strung along the

The distance of a foot between the open bookshelves and the eight-foot ceiling was enclosed to conceal hi-fi speakers set sufficiently far apart to achieve excellent stereophonic effects. Cane panel inserts were placed in the hi-fi valance.

A frame of 1-by-2-inch boards was set about six inches from the bookcase, running vertically to the valance above, but recessing the bookcase. These uprights were placed about 30 inches apart on the horizontal 1-by-4-inch board on the floor.

Window shades were hung from the valance. When drawn, the edges of shades are concealed by the uprights. When completely lowered, they fit behind the floor board of the frame. The shades' valance. Tops Field Boston's Runnels Traded For Power-Hitter Mejias rade-conscious major leagues signaled the opening of the annual baseball convention today by completing three major player swaps with the promise of more to come.

By JOE REICHLER Associated Press Sports Writer ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)-The

The most important transaction involved the Boston Red Sox and the Houston Colts. The Red Sox, still on the prowl for right-handed hitters who can tattoo the left field wall at Fenway Park, traded away their American League batting champion, Pete Runnels, for Houston's slugging outfielder, Roman Meijas.

Runnels also won the American League batting title in 1960.

Although Runnels hit .326 last season to Mejias' .286, new Red Sox manager Johnny Pesky was convinced Mejias' long ball power would be more helpful than the spray-hitting of the southpaw-hitting Runnels, who hit only 10 home runs—a career high—to 24 for the former Colt outfielder. Meias also drove in more runs than Runnels, 76-60.

In a 2-for-1 trade, Baltimore ac-

OFF THE RECORD

-Junior Editors Quiz on-OLD SAYING

QUESTION: Where did the phrase "a flash in the pan" come from?

ANSWER: This came from the days of the flintrock rifle, which lasted from the 17th Century to about 1850, when the flintrock mechanism was replaced by the percussion lock. Our upper picture shows how the flintrock worked. The hammer, holding the flint, was pulled back or "cocked" (A). The steel "frizzen," was snapped forward, uncovering the "flash pan." This was filled with powder and the frizzen snapped back over it. The main charge of powder and the bullet were inserted into the barrel from the muzzle with a ramrod, a small hole led from the flash pan to the main powder charge. When the trigger was pulled, the hammer fell down, knocking the frizzen forward and uncovering the flash pan (B). Sparks fell on the powder, setting off a flash which shot through the hole into the barrel, igniting the main charge and firing the gun. Generally enough flame or sparks shot through the hole to fire the gun, but sometimes there might not be enough, or the main charge might have become damp. Then, although there would be a "flash in the pan," the gun itself would not go off. A "flash in the pan" came to describe a person or event great in promise but short on performance.

* FOR YOU TO DO: Don't back down on promises, unless for a very good reason. Don't be a "flash in the pan." When you're aiming at something worthwhile, go right through with it, shoot!

* * * Harrison Scott of Midland, Mich., wins $10 for this question. Mail yours on a postcard to Junior Editors in care of The Review. It may win $10 or the weekly award of a Britannica Junior Encyclopedia.
